Roll for Doilies of Cretonne

A doily roll makes a pretty gift for the housewife and is useful to her in more ways than one. It keeps her doilies fresh and easy to get at. Nothing is easier to make, and very few equally pretty gifts cost so little.

The rolls are usually made in two lengths, one for centerpiece and one for doilies. To make one a strong pasteboard tube, such as used for mailing is preferred. Circular pieces of cretonne are stretched over the ends and pasted down on the roll.

A strip of the cretonne as wide as the tube is long is then cut off of any length desired. One end of this strip is trimmed in a curve and the other left straight. The curved end and sides of the strip are bound with tape.

The straight end is pasted to the roll, the cretonne wound once about it and sewed down to form a casing for it. Ribbon ends are sewed to the curved end of cretonne to form ties for fastening it when the doilies have been rolled.

The cretonne used to make the roll shown in the picture is a striped pattern with small flowers scattered over the surface. Dark backgrounds with gray flowers make rolls that do not easily soil. The ribbon used should match the flowers or foliage in the pattern.

Darning Bag of Silkalene

Two squares of figured silkalene are placed face to face and machine stitched together in a felled seam. One corner is then cut off and the bag and corner piece turned right side out.

The edges, made by cutting off the corner that was cut away, are folded over a small smbrodery hoop and sewed down. The bag is suspended by means of a fold of the silkalene, with edges machine stitched together and ends sewed to each side of the opening.

The corner that was cut away is stuffed with cotton or sandust and bound with tape, making a cushion for darning needles. A little piece of tape is sewed to one edge of it and to the bag, attaching it to the opening. This provides a receptacle for hosiery that needs darning.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Robinson of Hinley, were registered in town the last of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Bravos of Alpine, Texas, were in town the last of last week. Mr. Bravos is one of the successful mining men of his section.

Mrs. Emma E. King of Texas arrived in Deming Friday and is looking for a location.
